The Nursing Process

Nursing is not simply a collection of specific skills, and the nurse is not simply a person who performs specific tasks.

Nursing originated with the desire to keep people healthy and provide care to the ill.

The term “Nursing process” was first introduced in 1955. Nursing process is a systematic method for providing personal care for clients in all states of health.

The nursing process has five interrelated steps: assessment, nursing diagnosis, planning, implementation and evaluation. During the planning step, the nurse and the client plan expected results and nursing care. During the implementation step, the nurse performs nursing actions and gives nursing care to the client.

The purpose of the five-step nursing process are to establish a client data base; identify the client health care needs; determine goals, expected results, proper care.

The nurse is present at the time of birth and she is sometimes present when life ends. Her whole life is devoted to people. She is responsible for what she does. She is responsible for what she advises others to do.

Every nurse must have enough knowledge of her work. She must read medical journals. She must help her patients at any hour of the day or night.
